U.S. coronavirus deaths surpass 140,000 as outbreak worsens

Washington, July 19 (RHC)-- In the United States, deaths from the novel coronavirus exceeded 140,000 on Saturday as cases continued to rise in 43 out of 50 states over the past two weeks, according to both Johns Hopkins University and Reuters tallies.

Since late June, the U.S. has seen a resurgence in new cases and now, six weeks later, deaths have also begun rising, according to a weekly Reuters analysis of state and county data.

America is losing about 5,000 people to the virus every week. By contrast, neighboring Canada has reported total deaths of 8,800 since the pandemic started.

In just one week, the United States records about as many deaths as the 5,600 lives Sweden has lost since the pandemic began earlier this year.

https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/228963-us-coronavirus-deaths-surpass-140000-as-outbreak-worsens

Radio Habana Cuba