

Donald Trump Called for Tenfold Increase in Nuclear Weapons Arsenal

Washington, October 12 (RHC)-- In news from the United States, officials say President Donald Trump has called for a nearly tenfold increase in the U.S.'s nuclear weapons arsenal.

The unnamed officials told NBC News that Trump called for the massive nuclear arms build-up during a July 20 meeting with the highest-ranking military leaders. It was after this meeting that Secretary of State Rex Tillerson reportedly called Trump a "moron."

In response, Trump has now called for an IQ competition with Tillerson. In an interview with Forbes published Tuesday, Trump said about the alleged "moron" comment: "If he did that, I guess we'll have to compare IQ tests."