Chile Takes Special Security Measures for Americas Cup

Two weeks before the inauguration of the Americas Cup in Chile, local authorities said they are rigorously implementing a security plan to prevent foreigners with a criminal record to arrive in the country.

The undersecretary (deputy minister) of the Interior, Mahmud Aleuy, told reporters that border control will be reinforced by Interpol officers, a collaboration that began in October 2014.

"The government's interest is to create secure conditions so that foreigners and nationals can feel that Chile is prepared to organize a great event in a pleasant and safe environment," the minister noted.

The violence that often breaks out during the national league games forced the government to enact a new Rights and Duties Act for participants and organizers of professional football shows.

According to experts, the act includes new crimes and infractions and establishes tougher sentences to eradicate the impunity allowed by the previous act of 1994.

The Americas Cup will be held from June 11th to July 4th with participation of Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Colombia, Chile, Jamaica, Mexico, Bolivia, Venezuela, Paraguay, Ecuador and Peru.
