A total of 431 runners from the United States are registered to compete in the next edition of Marabana, which is a record figure, announced Carlos Gattorno, general director of the famous Cuban marathon project.

This unprecedented participation highlights among the new characteristics of the 1st edition of a Marabana after the re-establishment of relations between Havana and Washington, originally set on December 17th, 2014.

Although the figure could rise, 431 U.S. athletes and 16 Puerto Rican already formalized their on-line registration by paying the appropriate fee, said Gattorno.

In addition to the current political situation, the U.S. presence is authorized by 1 of the 12 licenses provided by Washington for its nationals to travel to Cuba. Marabana-2015 is scheduled for the 3rd Sunday of November and for the 1st time this year requires participants' qualification.

According to Gattorno, the 2,300 runners who completed the race last year are automatically qualified, and the rest will do so in individual races on July 18th and August 13th.

This marathon celebrates the anniversary of the founding of Havana and the Day of Physical Culture and Sports in Cuba, and has replicas across the country by Maracuba project.

Santiago 500: Chess House: Emblematic Site

The Jose Raul Capablanca Chess House, located in the centric Cespedes Park in the eastern city of Santiago de Cuba, is one of the most visited installations by chess lovers and is highlighted by its colonial façade dating back to the end of the 18th century, where the genius Capablanca once asked to local participants to play against 30 simultaneous tables in 1938.

Antonio Gonzalez Trujillo, recognized as one of the fathers of chess in Santiago, recalls that game. That day the young Carlos Santos excited for playing against Capablanca responded: No maestro, let's give that game more time because the privilege of your presence deserves it.

Currently this is one of the institutions that maintains the tradition of chess alive in this city, known as the Heroic City, and named as the Chess House that carries the name of the major exponent of the science sport in Cuba.

The house, located in the colonial sector of the city, which is about to celebrate its 500th anniversary, has not always been home to the provincial academy but before the triumph of the Revolution it was the site of the Society of the Centro Gallego, commented Gonzalez Trujillo who was its director and professor for many years.

The site holds testimonies of figures like Enrique Figuerola, first Olympic medalist of the province and other greats like Alberto Juantorena, Norge Luis Vera, Mercedes Calderon, Yunidis Castillo, Sergio Arturo, and others.

The installation is the best site to honor the 6 greatest chess Maestros of Santiago de Cuba like Maritza Arriba Tobaina, Zirka Frometa Castillo, Eldis Cobo Artiaga, Carlos Larduet Despaigne, Oleini Linares Napoles and Lelys Martienz Duany.

With the objective of showing off the splendor of Santiago de Cuba in commemoration of its 500th anniversary, the institution is under refurbishing for current and future generation, said its director, Jose Reyes.

The breeze of a renovated city and the hospitable environment involved in a chess game are found in the surrounding areas of Cespedes Park for those that want to try out their luck in a game of chess.

Athletics

The 40th edition of Lausanne's famous Athletissima meeting, the 9th event in this season's IAAF Diamond League, offers a welter of events featuring that priceless commodity within any sport -- true competition.

A total of 10 reigning Olympic champions, 7 world champions and 9 European champions will converge on the Stade De La Pontaise on Thursday night. Among the most eagerly awaited confrontations will be the re-match between the two triple jumpers who reached historic heights -or rather, lengths- in the opening IAAF Diamond League of the season in Doha, Cuba's Pedro Pablo Pichardo and Olympic champion Christian Taylor.

No other triple jump competition had previously involved more than one man surpassing 18 meters, but the pair became only the 4th and 5th men in history to better that mark as Pichardo eventually triumphed with an IAAF Diamond League record of 18.06m, with his US rival just 2 centimeters behind.

Thus, competition will be just as tight in some of the marquee events on the track and field as Britain's Mo Farah faces a strong Ethiopian trio in the 5000m comprising Hagos Gebriwet,

Imane Merga, and the prodigious 17-year-old who won in Rome in a world-leading time of 12:58.39, Yomif Kejelcha.

Paris Presents Candidacy for 2024 Olympic Games

The mayor of Paris, Anne Hidalgo, officially announced the candidacy of the French capital for the Summer Olympics 2024.

Hidalgo expressed in a letter his hope that if Paris wins the nomination and organizes the summer event of the year, the swimming career test for triathlon will be held at the legendary river Seine, which crosses the French capital.

Our city is already working for it. Parisians will be able to swim in the Seine after 2024, thanks to the Games, he said.

The mayor added that "a new era will open for Parisians and the possibility for each one to take a bath in the Seine will be part of the "precious heritage" Olympic Games should leave, he said.

Today, bathing in the emblematic river is prohibited in its passage through Paris, mainly because of water contamination.
