

David Cameron Steps Down from British Parliament

London, September 14 (RHC)-- Former British Prime Minister David Cameron has stepped down from the UK Parliament. This comes after Cameron resigned as prime minister in July, less than a month after Britain shocked the world by voting to leave the European Union -- a move he'd strongly opposed.

Cameron had initially said he wouldn't resign as prime minister until October and that he would continue to serve as a Parliament member. But Cameron has now stepped down from Parliament, saying he didn't want to be a distraction for the new prime minister, Theresa May.
