

Frente Farabundo Marti Candidate Leads Electoral Race in El Salvador

San Salvador, January 14 (RHC)-- The presidential candidate of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), Salvador Sanchez Ceren, remains at the forefront of the electoral race in El Salvador, with 49 percent of voting intention, according to the latest survey by CID-Gallup pollster.

The survey results were published Monday by national media and Sanchez Ceren was placed in the preferential spot with 49 percent of the voters' intention, followed by Norman Quijano from the ARENA party, with 37 percent. Meanwhile, Antonio Saca of the UNITY movement fell to third place with 14 percent.

In the coming elections of February 2nd, Salvadoran voters will elect the president and vice president for the 2014-2019 term. In order to win, a candidate must secure over 50 percent of the vote, otherwise the two finalists will undergo a second round scheduled for March 9th.
