

At Least 22 Injured by Bomb Left in London Subway

London, September 15 (RHC)-- In London, at least 22 people were left injured -- some with serious burns -- after a homemade bomb exploded Friday aboard a train at a London Underground subway station.

Video shared on social media showed flames pouring from what appears to be a white bucket inside a bag. Most of those injured suffered flash burns; others were hurt when the blast triggered a stampede.

The British government says it's investigating the explosion as a terrorist incident.
