

Chinese Communist Party Enshrines Xi's Thoughts in Charter

Beijing, October 24 (RHC)-- The 19th National Congress of the Chinese Communist Party concluded in Beijing Tuesday with the election of the Party's top leadership and the announcement that Xi Jinping's Thoughts on Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era has been written into the party charter.

Speaking at the closing session, Xi, reelected as General Secretary of the organization, said that China's socialist system demonstrates great strength and vitality.

"Our Party shows strong, firm and vibrant leadership. We believe that all the decisions and plans the congress has made and all the achievements it has made will play a vital role in guiding and ensuring success in our major endeavors," Xi said.

The Chinese leader said that the Party has united and led the Chinese people and that in the organization, each and every one of its members must stay truly connected to the people.

"Living in such a great era, we are all the more confident and proud, and also feel the heavy weight of responsibility upon us," he said.

“We must have the courage and resolve to build on the historic achievements made by the Chinese people under the leadership of the Chinese Communists generation after generation, create new accomplishments befitting this great epoch and stride forward to an ever promising future,” Xi stressed.
