

Venezuelan President Maduro Invites the Opposition to Meet at Miraflores

Caracas, December 3 (RHC-AVN)--Venezuelan President Nicolás Maduro on Sunday invited opposition members to meet at the Miraflores Palace this in order to deepen the formal dialogue and review the six agenda items discussed in the Dominican Republic talks held last week.

"I want to invite deputy Julio Borges, deputy Luis Florido, deputy Timoteo Zambrano and deputy Luis Aquiles Moreno, on behalf of the political parties of the opposition Primero Justicia, Voluntad Popular, Acción Democrática and Un Nuevo Tiempo to the Miraflores Palace", said the president in his program "Sundays with Maduro"

The meeting would be held in the presence of the Dialogue Commission. The Venezuelan leader recalled that the Government maintains a constant dialogue with all the productive and social sectors of the country.

He also stressed the importance of consolidating a formal dialogue with each of the country's political sectors.

"Now it is necessary to have a dialogue with all the political actors of the country, with all the forces and political factors, I have insisted that there be a dialogue and a permanent system of transparent dialogue open to the country with the Venezuelan opposition," he added.
