

U.S. returns looted Iraqi artifacts acquired by Hobby Lobby

Washington, May 4 (RHC)-- The United States has returned thousands of ancient artifacts looted from Iraq and illegally acquired by the U.S.-based Christian craft chain store Hobby Lobby.

The handover of 3,800 artifacts to Iraq's ambassador in Washington came nearly a year after Hobby Lobby agreed to pay a $3 million fine, after it spent over $1.5 million in 2010 to purchase the smuggled artifacts from a dealer based in the United Arab Emirates. The sales violated a ban on the sale of Iraqi cultural artifacts in place since 2004.

Hobby Lobby's owners are conservative Christians who recently opened a Museum of the Bible in Washington, D.C. In 2014, Hobby Lobby won a landmark decision at the Supreme Court, which ruled that private companies that claim religious objections can refuse to provide birth control coverage to employees.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/161544-us-returns-looted-iraqi-artifacts-acquired-by-hobby-lobby>

Radio Habana Cuba