

Donald Trump White House has still not reunited 559 separated children with parents

Washington, August 11 (RHC)-- The Donald Trump administration has admitted that it has still not reunited 559 children immigration officials forcibly separated from their parents at the border. The hundreds of children are still in government custody more than two weeks after a court-imposed deadline requiring the Trump administration to reunite all of the separated families.

The separation of families has sparked massive condemnation and protest, including an Instagram campaign called "Dear Ivanka," in which celebrities, including Amy Schumer and Chelsea Handler, are calling on the president's daughter and senior White House adviser to take action on the ongoing crisis of family separation.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/168779-donald-trump-white-house-has-still-not-reunited-559-separated-children-with-parents>

Radio Habana Cuba