

Cuban residents in Miami recognize importance of the new Cuban Constitution

Miami, August 28 (RHC)-- Cuban emigrants living in Miami, Florida, have recognized the importance of the new constitutional law currently being discussed in their mother country.

The Miami-based Jose Marti Alliance coalition held a collective debate on the text of the proposed new Cuban constitution that was attended by more than forty of its members.

The national debate on the proposed new constitution for Cuba includes Cubans residing overseas, who are invited to submit their proposals of changes or additions to the text as of the first week of September. They will be able to submit their opinions digitally via the webpage www.nacionyemigracion.cu.
