

U.S. government to triple size of Texas tent camp for migrant children

Washington, September 17 (RHC)-- In the U.S., the Health and Human Services Department says it will triple the size of the tent camp where migrant children are imprisoned in the desert outside El Paso, Texas.

The Trump administration established the tent camp in Tornillo in June as a temporary shelter amid the administration's "zero tolerance" policy, which included forcibly separating children from their parents. Officials say they are now expanding it to contain 3,800 beds for migrant children.
