

Second Ordinary Session of 9th Legislature of Cuban Parliament convened for December 21st

Havana, December 1 (RHC)-- The president of the National Assembly of People's Power, Esteban Lazo Hernández, has officially convened the deputies for the second ordinary session of the 9th legislature to take place on December 21st.

In an official statement published in Granma newspaper, Lazo said that prior to the plenary session, deputies will meet from December 16 through 20, in the different permanent committees for their usual work and for the analysis of the Draft Constitution.

In November, the parliament committee chaired by the First Secretary of the Cuban Communist Party, Raul Castro, made a thorough analysis of the proposals raised by millions of participants in the Popular Consultation on the Draft Constitution that took place from August 13 through November 15.

The committee worked on the modifications that are to be made to the document, that will now be discussed by the 605 deputies that make up the Parliament before it is submitted to an island wide referendum early next year.
