

Morocco begins new round of talks over status of Western Sahara

United Nations, March 23 (RHC)-- The United Nations has convened a new round of talks between the Kingdom of Morocco and the Western Saharan liberation movement known as the Polisario Front, aimed at resolving the 43-year-old conflict.

Morocco has occupied Western Sahara since 1975, and no other country on Earth recognizes its sovereignty over the territory. Thousands of Western Sahara's indigenous people -- the Sahrawi -- have since been tortured, imprisoned, killed and disappeared while resisting the Moroccan occupation.

Earlier this week, Moroccan authorities assaulted a peaceful assembly of women in the streets of the Western Saharan capital Laayoune as they demonstrated in favor of a referendum on the status of the territory.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/186607-morocco-begins-new-round-of-talks-over-status-of-western-sahara>

Radio Habana Cuba