

U.S. activists arrested after blockading Port of Vancouver in pipeline protest

Vancouver, November 6 (RHC)-- In the U.S. Pacific Northwest, five activists were arrested for blockading part of the Port of Vancouver, Washington, to prevent a shipment of pipeline intended to be used in an expansion of Canada's Trans Mountain pipeline.

Five climbers locked themselves to the dock where the shipment was to be offloaded. This was the latest action demanding that the Port of Vancouver and government officials halt the oil pipeline's expansion, which would triple the system's capacity.
