

Mexican foreign minister visits Cuba to strengthen bilateral relations

Havana, November 9 (RHC)-- Cuba's Minister of Foreign Affairs, Bruno Rodríguez, received this Saturday his Mexican counterpart, Marcelo Ebrard, who is on an official visit on the island to strengthen bilateral ties.

"This contact seeks to translate the affection between the two peoples into cooperative actions that will offer positive results in the coming months and years," said Ebrard, who heads the first official high-level delegation of the northern nation to visit the island since President Andrés Manuel López Obrador took office on December 1, 2018.

He said that Mexico began a new stage in its relations with Cuba that will be better, and broader.

For his part, Rodríguez expressed the will to deepen ties in the cultural, academic, scientific, economic, commercial, cooperation, and political spheres.

He also thanked Mexico for its recent vote in the United Nations in favor of the resolution presented by Cuba before that body, which demanded the end of the economic, commercial and financial blockade of the United States, and which 187 countries supported.

The Cuban Foreign Minister described as excellent the state of the current links between the two countries and pointed out that they have a great perspective rooted in the relationship of trust that exists between the two countries.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/nacionales/207138-mexican-foreign-minister-visits-cuba-to-strengthen-bilateral-relations>

Radio Habana Cuba