

Boeing stops production of 737 MAX passenger plane

Chicago, January 23 (RHC)-- In the U.S., the manufacturing giant Boeing has officially stopped production of the flawed 737 MAX airliner, which has been grounded worldwide since March following two fatal crashes in Ethiopia and Indonesia that killed all 346 people on board.

Recently released internal e-mails show Boeing employees talking about deceiving federal regulators and joking about potential safety flaws in the plane's design.
