Badminton

The Cuban badmintonist Osleni Guerrero maintains a good position in global ranking, standing at the 54th place while being the leader of the American continent in that sport, said today the National Information Agency, AIN, in Havana.

Baseball

Cuban baseball player Antonio Muñoz, an ex-captain of the national team, was named today Illustrious Son of Cienfuegos City (in central-southern Cuba), on occasion of the 159th anniversary of its foundation. "I feel myself as much a son of Algaba (a town in central Cuba where he was born on Jan. 17th, 1949) as I am of Cienfuegos," Munoz, also known as the Giant of Escambray, told Prensa Latina news agency.

The resolution issued by the local government in this regard highlights the modesty of a sports figure who has managed to win the affection of fans in and out of stadiums.

Muñoz, first baseman of Cuban teams from 1974-1986, came to live in Cienfuegos in mid 1979 after winning his last title in the Cuban League Championships with the team of Sancti-Spiritus, his home-province.

He retired as an active member of the Cienfuegos team in January, 1999, after taking part in National Series for 24 years and leading in many offensive aspects, including 370 home runs.

He is remembered by his legendary home run leading to Cuba's win over Japan in the Amateur World Baseball Championship of 1980, held in Japan.

After his retirement he managed for 2 seasons the Cienfuegos team in Cuban championships and he coached the Italian team that took part in the Athens Olympics, among other competitions.
