WHO receives $30 million from China to fight COVID-19

Beijing, April 24 (RHC)-- The World Health Organization (WHO) will receive a $30 million grant from the government of China to use these resources for the containment of COVID-19.

The announcement of the donation was made by the Chinese Foreign Ministry's spokesperson Hua Chunying. On her Twitter account, Hua Chunying recalled that the government donated $20 million in cash to the WHO on March 11th.

China's donation comes one week after President Donald Trump's administration announced the end of funding to the World Health Organization.

For Trump, the WHO mishandled the pandemic, even though at the time of the outbreak in late 2019, a team of U.S. scientists was working at the organization's headquarters. These scientists kept Donald Trump's administration informed of the progress of the new coronavirus in China, step by step.

Today, China seeks "to support the WHO's fight against COVID-19. We support multilateralism and global solidarity," Hua Chunying said
