

Cuban Vice President Attends Inauguration of New Costa Rican President

Havana, May 7 (RHC) – Cuban Vice President Gladys Bejerano is heading the Cuban delegation to the swearing-in ceremony of new Costa Rican President Luis Guillermo Solís, to take place tomorrow, May 8th, in that central American country.

The island's delegation also includes Deputy Foreign Minister Abelardo Moreno, according to this morning's edition of Granma newspaper.

The inauguration ceremony gets underway Thursday morning at Costa Rica's National Stadium at La Sabana Park, in western San José. Outgoing president Laura Chinchilla is expected to hand over the presidential sash to Luis Guillermo Solís at midday. According to local media, up to 10 heads of state are expected to attend, mostly from Latin American and Caribbean countries.
