

Beijing can screen almost one million people daily for coronavirus

Beijing, June 21 (RHC)-- The Chinese capital is capable of screening almost one million people a day for the coronavirus, an official said, as testing continued across the city to try to contain the spread of a fresh outbreak.

Beijing has been expanding testing in the city of 20 million since a cluster of infections linked to a food wholesale market erupted over a week ago. The outbreak, the first in Beijing in months, has now surpassed previous peak numbers in the city in early February.
