

Mexico's coronavirus death toll surpasses 30,000

Mexico City, July 6 (RHC)-- Mexico's health ministry has reported 523 more deaths from the novel coronavirus, bringing the total to 30,366, and 6,014 new infections, bringing the total to 252,165.

The government has previously said the actual number of infected people is likely significantly higher than the number of confirmed cases.

Citing unpublished figures from the country's civil registry, broadcaster Milenio reported that as of June 19th, nearly twice as many people had died from the coronavirus than were reported by Deputy Health Minister Hugo Lopez-Gatell. Reuters news agency was unable to verify the information.
