

Search begins for mass graves from 1921 race massacre in United States

Tulsa, July 15 (RHC)-- In news from the U.S. state of Oklahoma, archaeologists and forensic anthropologists have begun digging up part of a Tulsa cemetery looking for mass graves nearly a century after one of the worst massacres of African Americans in U.S. history.

In June 1921, a white mob burned to the ground Tulsa's affluent African American neighborhood of Greenwood, known as Black Wall Street, killing at least 300 residents.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/228643-search-begins-for-mass-graves-from-1921-race-massacre-in-united-states>

Radio Habana Cuba