

Millions of U.S. workers shortchanged on unemployment benefits

Millions of U.S. workers shortchanged on unemployment benefits

Washington, December 2 (RHC)-- The Government Accountability Office (GAO) reports millions of U.S. workers left unemployed by the pandemic have been denied the full jobless benefits they're owed, with a majority of states paying out the minimum benefit instead of a higher amount based on workers' prior earnings.

According to media reports, the GAO also found weekly Labor Department unemployment figures — which reached historic highs in 2020 — have significantly undercounted the number of people put out of work.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/241290-millions-of-us-workers-shortchanged-on-unemployment-benefits>

Radio Habana Cuba