

Trump administration works to roll back protections against civil rights

Washington, January 7 (RHC)-- The Donald Trump administration's Justice Department is seeking to undo long-standing protections against discrimination in the waning days of The Donald.

The proposed change to the Civil Rights Act affects a provision barring recipients of federal funding from discriminating based on race, color or national origin. The move would mean employers, housing programs, schools and hospitals could enact policies or practices that “disparately impact” minority groups, as long as intentional discrimination cannot be proven.
