

Cuba criticizes inequality in the U.S. for access to medical care

Havana, April 5 (RHC)-- Cuban Foreign Minister Bruno Rodríguez criticized the inequality and poverty that prevent millions of citizens in the United States from accessing health services.

On Twitter, he reiterated the negative impact of Covid-19 on the people of that country.

The U.S. could have avoided more than 400,000 deaths due to Covid-19 if it had had an effective response to the pandemic, according to experts, he wrote. According to data published by the U.S. media, the U.S. has registered more than 30 million cases since the beginning of the pandemic.

According to the New York Times, the U.S. reports more than 555,000 deaths due to Covid-19, which places the country among the most affected globally.

Recently, Rodriguez emphasized that in the United States, there is a health system designed for profit instead of serving society.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/nacionales/252963-cuba-criticizes-inequality-in-the-us-for-access-to-medical-care>

Radio Habana Cuba