Havana, November 5 (RHC)-- The 18th edition of the International Convention and Fair Informatics 2022 will take place from March 21 to 25 at Havana's Convention Center and virtual platforms.

The Scientific Committee of the event highlights as important dates the submission of papers until December 23, 2021; the notification of acceptance until January 21, 2022; while the submission of articles for publication will be February 11, 2022.

Informatics 2022 will address Telecommunications, Management and Innovation of Organizations, Informatics from the Community; Computer Science and Information, Security in Information Technologies; Software Industry, Electronics, Automation and Robotics, Technologies, Electronic Commerce and Digital Contents.

On this occasion, the event will be hybrid, with virtual and face-to-face activities. This novelty will allow the participation of a larger number of people, even if they are in different places and countries, and will make information and courses more accessible.
