

U.S. COVID-19 cases surge ahead of Thanksgiving holiday

U.S. coronavirus infections and hospitalizations are continuing to rise, even as COVID-19 continues to claim more than 1,000 lives per day.

Washington, November 22 (RHC)-- U.S. coronavirus infections and hospitalizations are continuing to rise, even as COVID-19 continues to claim more than 1,000 lives per day. Cases among children are up 32 percent from two weeks ago, representing about a quarter of all U.S. infections.

Earlier this week, top infectious disease expert Dr. Anthony Fauci called on everyone 5 and older to get vaccinated, warning the Thanksgiving holiday could trigger a dangerous winter surge unless people take measures now to slow the spread of coronavirus.

Meanwhile, the White House said Monday 95% of federal employees have met a vaccine mandate covering 3.5 million U.S. government workers. And the CDC added Germany and Denmark to a list of high risk destinations, amid a massive surge of COVID cases across most of Europe.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/277931-us-covid-19-cases-surge-ahead-of-thanksgiving-holiday>

Radio Habana Cuba