

U.S. government sends health workers to state with largest COVID surge

Washington, November 30 (RHC)-- The Joe Biden administration is sending medical teams to Michigan, which is at the forefront of the latest U.S. surge, accounting for around one-in-10 new cases.

Infections shot up by two-thirds last week and hospitalizations increased by nearly 50% over the past two weeks. Only 54% of Michigan residents are fully vaccinated, lower than the national average of 59%. According to statistics, unvaccinated people represent the vast majority of deaths and severe cases.
