

U.S. judge dismisses Donald Trump's attempt to shield tax documents

Look out! Here come the Trumps!

Washington, December 15 (RHC)-- A U.S. federal judge blocked a bid by former president Donald Trump to shield his tax returns to lawmakers on the House Ways and Means Committee. The Treasury, controlled by Trump appointees, refused to hand over the documents during Trump's presidency.

Meanwhile, Trump's longtime accountant, as well as a loan officer at Deutsche Bank, reportedly testified in recent weeks before a New York grand jury as part of the Manhattan district attorney's ongoing probe into financial crimes by the Trump Organization.

The District Attorney's Office is looking into whether Trump intentionally misled investors about the value of his assets, which many observers say is entirely possible given The Donald's track record.
