

Women in U.S. prison accuse guards of letting men attack them in their cells

Women held in a county jail in the U.S. state of Indiana have filed lawsuits over what is being described as a “night of terror.”

Indianapolis, July 28 (RHC)-- Women held in a county jail in the U.S. state of Indiana have filed lawsuits over what is being described as a “night of terror.”

Twenty-eight women say they were raped, groped and assaulted by male prisoners inside the Clark County Jail after a jail official gave two male prisoners keys to the women’s area in exchange for $1,000.

The lawsuit also claims jail officials allowed the attack to go on for hours, even though it could be seen on surveillance video. Twenty women filed a lawsuit in June; eight more filed a lawsuit this past week.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/294814-women-in-us-prison-accuse-guards-of-letting-men-attack-them-in-their-cells>

Radio Habana Cuba