

Paraguay's Fernando Lugo discharged from hospital

Asunción, March 7 (RHC)-- Former Paraguayan President Fernando Lugo (2006-2008) was discharged from a hospital on Monday after being hospitalized for months due to a stroke he suffered on August 10th last year.

Presidential candidate Efraín Alegre welcomed the medical discharge of the former president. "We visited the beloved President Fernando Lugo, we talked about the challenges and hope for change. We were participants in the wonderful news of his medical discharge," he said via Twitter.

According to several political leaders in the country, the current senator for the Frente Guasú could soon return to his country. Last week, Lugo virtually returned to his functions as senator of the Paraguayan Congress.

An ischemic stroke on August 10 last year led to Lugo's hospitalization on September 7 at the Fleni Institute of Rehabilitation and Therapeutic Education in the Argentine capital.

Lugo is one of the candidates of the political coalition Guasú Front for the Upper House of Congress, in the general elections scheduled for April 30th.
