

Third International Congress of Neurodevelopment underway in Varadero

Varadero is hosting Third International Congress on Neurodevelopment

Havana, April 4 (RHC)-- From April 4th to the 6th, the Third International Congress of Neurodevelopment and Early Attention is being held in Varadero, with the participation of experts from various Latin American nations.

The event, sponsored by the Rosa Luxemburg Center, located in the city of Cárdenas, and the Mexican Institute for Early Stimulation and Human Development, will present its symposium on neurodevelopment and neurorehabilitation on this day.

The program includes several proposals on Neurodevelopment from the perspective of clinical diagnosis (Colombia), epigenetics (Mexico), and the impact of an early intervention protocol (Cuba), as well as an integrative look at autism spectrum disorders.

Specialists from Chile, Brazil, Panama, Argentina and Costa Rica will participate in the Congress, which is also sponsored by the Cuban Society of Neurosciences, the University of Medical Sciences of Matanzas and the Provincial Council of Scientific Societies of the province of Matanzas.
