Cuban president highlights resilience of the Cuban people

Havana, April 20 (RHC) - President Miguel Díaz-Canel said in Havana that Cuba is capable of facing the worst scenarios.

After the constitutive session of the 10th Legislature of the National Assembly of People's Power - Parliament-, the president stressed that it is difficult to summarize the creative resistance and resilience of the people facing extremely difficult conditions.

He said that in the immediate future, the country's direction should focus on food production, the increase of tourism, and the efficiency of the investment process; to increase supply and reduce inflation.

He stated that due to the U.S. blockade and internal insufficiencies, the objective of reaching the economic goals is slowing down. Likewise, he added that from the feats achieved during his previous term of office, he draws optimism to face each of the adverse situations. (Source: Prensa Latina).
