Havana, May 5 (RHC)-- The New Latin American Film Festival, which Cuba organizes every year, is publishing today on its social networks a sample of posters from previous editions of the event.

The initiative is part of the graphic campaign through which the institution summoned Cuban designers to participate in the creation of the image that will distinguish the main film event held in the Caribbean island.

The cultural center shared on its Twitter profile the graphics of the first 10 editions of the Festival and plans to follow this dynamic in order to go through its history and provide creative references to participants in the contest.

They show the diversity of styles that have marked the posters of this seventh art event in the use of typography and other design elements.

The 44th edition of the Festival will be held from December 8 to 17, 2023 in Havana and will be an opportunity for a reunion with Latin American and international cinema. (Source:PL)
