

Evo Morales announces candidacy for the presidency of Bolivia

La Paz, September 25 (RHC)-- The former president of Bolivia, Evo Morales, announced Sunday his intention to run again for the presidency of the country for the elections of 2025.

"We have decided to accept the requests of our militancy and of so many sisters and brothers attending rallies across the country to be a candidate for the presidency of our beloved Bolivia," Morales (2006-2019) wrote in a message posted on the social network X (formerly Twitter).

"I'm going to give it everything I can. We still have strength. We are going to face with truth, dignity and honesty all that aggression that we suffer in social networks from the Ministry of the Presidency," said the former president.

Evo denounced that a plan has been launched that would have the purpose of disqualifying him for the 2025 elections.

He added: "We are going to fight. We are heirs of the struggles of our ancestors who have taught us to never give up. We will never give up, sisters and brothers! United we will save our beloved Bolivia once again!"
