

Solidarity campaign in Pakistan launches boycott of U.S. and Israeli products

Image not found or type unknown

Islamabad, November 9 (RHC)-- As Israel intensifies its military operation in Gaza, public sentiment in Pakistan has shifted sharply against companies and brands that are perceived to be pro-Israel or pro-

America.

Social media campaigns have been launched calling for a boycott of popular international brands like McDonald's, KFC, Pizza Hut, Coke, Pepsi and many others.

Influencers and public figures are using their platforms to urge people to refrain from purchasing from these companies, which are seen as supportive of Israel and the United States. To demonstrate our support for Palestinians, we can impose bans on products from companies that are directly or indirectly backing Israel.

One organizer said: "I urge people worldwide to rise beyond religious or national differences and stand together in the name of humanity by boycotting pro-Israeli and pro-American companies."

Organizers of rallies in Pakistan urged Muslim states to rise up for Gaza, instead of being slaves of the United States. The ongoing war on Gaza has fueled a wave of anger and frustration among Pakistanis who view these companies as complicit in the violence and suffering of Palestinians.

By refusing to purchase products from companies that support Israel, we can show our solidarity with Palestinians and contribute to their cause. As a result of this boycott, the sales of pro-Israeli companies in Pakistan have witnessed a record decline in recent weeks.

One business owner said: "Ever since the boycott campaign started, we have noticed a significant drop in sales of the U.S. and Israeli made products." Customers are increasingly avoiding products that are associated with the United States or Israel, and it's impacting business, hitting retailers hard and where it hurts the most: the pocketbook.

In response, businesses are actively leveraging social media to try to recover their market share and restore their public image.

The call for a boycott of pro-Israeli companies is a testament to the deep empathy and concern of Pakistanis for the plight of the Palestinian people and their desire to contribute to a resolution of the conflict.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/338859-solidarity-campaign-in-pakistan-launches-boycott-of-us-and-israeli-products>

Radio Habana Cuba