

U.S. State Department favors so-called Transition Period with Israeli occupation forces in Gaza

Image not found or type unknown

Washington, December 8 (RHC)-- The United States understands that there will be a "transition period" in which Israeli forces remain in Gaza after the end of so-called "combat operations" against Hamas, but that cannot be permanent, State Department spokesperson Matt Miller said Wednesday.

It would not be "in anyone's interest ... for Israel to just leave — and leave a security vacuum in place where there could be rampant lawlessness inside Gaza, innocent civilians exploited," Miller said at a press briefing. "We understand there will need to be some transition period at the end of combat operations," he added.

But, the U.S. official claimed that Washington would not accept a reoccupation of Gaza by Israel, nor would it accept a buffer zone established within Gaza because it would violate the principle of no reduction of territory.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/341641-us-state-department-favors-so-called-transition-period-with-israeli-occupation-forces-in-gaza>

Radio Habana Cuba