

University students in U.S. end hunger strike, but continue to demand divestment

Providence, February 12 (RHC)-- In Providence, Rhode Island, Brown University students ended an eight-day hunger strike demanding Brown divest from companies supplying Israel with military equipment.

The students say they will continue fighting for divestment and for Palestinian rights.

In November, a Palestinian American student at Brown, Hisham Awartani, was left paralyzed after being shot along with two friends in Burlington, Vermont.
