Ramallah, October 31 (RHC)-- In the occupied West Bank, lawyers for Marwan Barghout say the longtime Palestinian political prisoner was assaulted by Israeli guards as he was held in solitary confinement.

The beating in early September reportedly left Barghouti with numerous injuries to his upper body and a bloody ear that later became infected due to medical neglect.

Barghouthi's lawyers say he was previously subjected to at least two other attacks by Israeli prison guards.

Barghouti is the most high-profile Palestinian in Israeli detention, who many have described as the "Palestinian Nelson Mandela."
