

Israeli envoy hails Germany for blocking EU's attempts to boycott Tel Aviv amid Gaza genocide

Tel Aviv's ambassador to Berlin, Ron Prosor

Berlin, May 10 (RHC)-- Israel's ambassador to Germany, Ron Prosor has called Berlin the regime's biggest friend in Europe, praising Germans' efforts to block EU's boycott campaign against Tel Aviv amid the Gaza genocide.

"There is no doubt that, despite all criticism, Germany is our greatest friend in Europe and Israel's second most important strategic partner in the world after the United States," the ambassador said in an interview published on May 10th.

He spoke highly of the former Chancellor of Germany, Olaf Scholz for his extraordinary support for the regime's genocidal war on Gaza. "I would like to stress that after October 7 the German government under former chancellor Olaf Scholz stood firmly with us. The number of German politicians who visited Tel Aviv – the president, the chancellor, the president of the Bundestag, ministers – is without any comparison to other European countries."

The Israeli diplomat continued by praising Germany for its role in safeguarding Israel against a European boycott as well as promoting the Zionist narrative within educational spheres through the EU. "On the academic level the Germans already assist us a lot in the EU in face of countries that wish to see the EU boycotting Israel."

Asked about the reason behind German people's hatred towards Israel, the regime's ambassador identified Germany's Muslim population and its left-wing party as the engines that enlightened the German population about the atrocities against Palestine.

"Berlin was always a center of antiestablishment movements and multiculturalism. It has a big Muslim immigrant community. Thus a combination of the Muslim migratory elements and a very strong progressive Left was created," he said.

While accusing Germans of the "genocide of Jews" twenty years after the end of World War II, the Israeli regime's official accused Germany's population of ignorance, saying the country's population does not understand what is best for their country as far as the relationship between Germany and Israel is concerned.

While many European nations are increasingly supporting efforts to boycott Israel over its treatment of Palestinians, Germany continues to adopt a double standard by offering unwavering political, economic, and diplomatic support to the Israeli regime.

Despite growing international condemnation of Israel's actions, Germany defends and facilitates its operations, presenting itself as a key strategic partner and shielding it from European-level sanctions or academic scrutiny.
