

Columbia University alumni burn diplomas to protest campus repression against pro-Palestinian students

New York, May 24 (RHC)-- In New York City, alumni from Columbia University and Barnard College ripped up and burned their diplomas outside their alma mater Wednesday to protest the repression of free speech and persecution of pro-Palestinian student protesters on campus.

Jeanie Dubnau, a Barnard graduate from the class of 1960, spoke with reporters, saying: "My parents came here to escape the fascism in Nazi Germany. And now I'm finding that we are facing fascism here in the United States, and Columbia University is opening its arms to this fascist government."

In related news, students and staff at the University of Oregon have joined hunger strikers across the country, demanding their school divest from Israel and protect free speech on campus. Hunger strikes are also ongoing at Yale, Stanford and at California State University schools.

[SOURCE: DEMOCRACY NOW]

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/383546-columbia-university-alumni-burn-diplomas-to-protest-campus-repression-against-pro-palestinian-students>

Radio Habana Cuba