

Writers Against the War on Gaza lays out New York Times's ties to Israeli occupation of Palestinian territories and Gaza genocide

EXPOSING THE NEW YORK TIMES

The Paper of Zionist Record

The New York Times is an accomplice to the genocide in Gaza, serving as a mouthpiece for American imperialism and shaping elite consensus around foreign policy. Times editors have told reporters to avoid "inflammatory terms" like "genocide," "ethnic cleansing" and "occupied territory" – and even to avoid saying "Palestine." Headline writers have manipulated the English language and deployed tricks of syntax to obscure the U.S. and Israel's perpetration of atrocities and blame Palestinians for their own oppression. Reporters have printed the Israeli military's lies.

The Times' commitment to Zionism is systemic and generational. For decades, critics of U.S. foreign policy have offered crucial analyses of the paper's bias. This dossier borrows from and adds to that body of criticism by exposing the material and ideological ties to occupation and apartheid held by many high-ranking editors, journalists, and executive officers at the Times. The employees included in this dossier are individually as well as structurally incentivized to run cover for war criminals. That these individuals are empowered to frame the discourse around Israel's genocide is an indictment of the entire institution of The New York Times.

Such an indictment demands a public response. Journalistic malpractice enables the weapons shipments that sustain the war on Gaza. The mass slaughter of a besieged people must be named for what it is: a genocide. The New York Times must be held accountable for its complicity. We continue to call on readers of the Times and members of the public to boycott, divest, and unsubscribe from the paper of criminal record. You can learn more about our campaign here.

This dossier is an ongoing and evolving project. To submit information about a Times staffer's ties to occupation and apartheid, write to our secure tipline: wawog@proton.me

Writers Against the War on Gaza lays out New York Times's ties to Israeli occupation of Palestinian territories and Gaza genocide

New York, July 18 (RHC)-- A group called Writers Against the War on Gaza has published a dossier accusing The New York Times of pro-Israel, anti-Palestinian bias.

The coalition's research builds on decades of analyses showing how many high-ranking New York Times editors, journalists, and executive officers hold material and ideological ties to Israeli occupation and apartheid; they also report Times editors have ordered reporters to avoid so-called "inflammatory terms" including "genocide," "ethnic cleansing," and "occupied territory" — and even to avoid saying "Palestine."
