

Trump warns that the United States could attack Iran again

Washington, July 24 (RHC)-- U.S. President Donald Trump is warning that the U.S. could attack Iran's nuclear facilities again, after striking three nuclear sites in June.

NBC News is reporting that only one of the sites was badly damaged but that the other two facilities could restart uranium enrichment within months.

Iran's foreign minister has said that the country cannot give up on nuclear enrichment.

Inside Iran, a series of mysterious fires and explosions have been reported on a daily basis. Officials suspect a coordinated sabotage campaign.

Meanwhile, Amnesty International is calling for an investigation into Israel's deliberate targeting of Evin Prison last month, saying the strikes must be investigated as war crimes.
