

Bolivia Sets Probable Date for ALBA Meeting on Climate Change

La Paz, December 27 (RHC-PL), -- Bolivian President Evo Morales said Friday Bolivia will host a meeting of social organizations of the Bolivarian Alliance for the Peoples of Our America (ALBA) on climate change next September or October 2015.

Morales said that he announced the initiative during the recent Summit of Heads of State and Government of the organization in Cuba, to pick up proposals and take them to the Conference of the United Nations on the topic, at the end of 2015 in France.

He also committed himself to organize an event in his country with a good quality, from there effective alternatives to combat the phenomenon, can emerge.

"I have an obligation to listen to social movements worldwide and fortunately, there are excellent reactions at least in Europe, I have no information from Africa, but we will do everything possible to make an international event and try to make the presidents listen to social movements of the world ', he added.
