

New England Hit with New Blizzard in Record Month of Snowfall

Boston, February 16 (RHC)-- In the United States, New England states have been hit with their fourth major snowstorm in less than a month. Two feet of snow fell in some areas, adding to up to six feet already on the ground.

February has already become Boston's snowiest month since records began in 1872, with reports the city has now recorded more snow in three weeks than Chicago has ever seen in an entire winter.

Climate scientist Michael Mann noted the link between record snowfall and climate change, tweeting: "If you deny that warmer ocean temps lead to greater snowfall with coastal winter storms, you are not a climate denier. You are a physics denier."

<https://www.radiohc.cu/en/noticias/internacionales/46788-new-england-hit-with-new-blizzard-in-record-month-of-snowfall>

Radio Habana Cuba