

Report Says NSA Embeds Spyware in Hard Drives Around the World

Washington, February 18 (RHC)-- A new probe finds the National Security Agency has embedded spying devices deep inside hard drives in computers around the world.

The Russian firm Kaspersky Lab says it uncovered the spyware in personal computers across 30 countries, from Iran, Russia, Pakistan and Libya, to China, Belgium, Ecuador and the United States.

The targets reportedly include government institutions, oil and gas firms, Islamic activists and scholars, and the media.
