

Top Commander of Taliban Killed in Afghanistan

Kabul, July 23 (RHC) -- One of the top commanders of the Taliban in Afghanistan has been killed in the southern province of Helmand, the former stronghold of the rebel group in the Central Asian country.

Mullah Zindani was killed in the attack, confirmed by the Afghan Interior Ministry in a statement, citing intelligence reports.

The Afghan Taliban has not yet commented on the news, which – if true – would be a major setback for the armed insurgent operations in the south, according to official media in Afghanistan.
