

Cuban President Meets with Visiting Counterpart from Namibia

Havana, September 15 (RHC)-- Cuban President Raúl Castro met at Havana's Revolution Palace with his visiting counterpart from the Republic of Namibia Hage Geingob.

The African leader's official visit aims to further strengthen bilateral cooperation ties.

Prior to his meeting with President Raúl, Gottfried Geingob paid tribute to José Martí at the Revolution Square, where he and his accompanying delegation toured the Memorial dedicated to the Cuban national hero.

During his stay, which runs through Thursday, September 17th, the Namibian head of state is scheduled to visit Havana's National Drugs Quality Control Center and the Carlos Juan Finlay Institute.

Cuba and Namibia established diplomatic relations on March 21st, 1990.

The African country have long supported Cuba's cause against the US blockade policy.

The two countries maintain good communications and exchanges in such sectors as the economy, trade, education, health, culture, sports and construction.
